Although it has been out but two weeks the fifteenth thousand has gone to press. Everybody reads it. In some respects it is far superior to the Lamplighter.

When the Lamplighter appeared, the reading public was taken by surprise. It was an original creation in literature, and was eagenly purchased and perused with an avidity that proved the author's power in touching the feelings. Since that period, although many attempts have been made, no work has been written, which, in the opinion of the best judges of literary merit, is calculated to achieve such success as the WATCH-MAN. It is a tale of real life and living characters—moral and chaste in its tone, and lofty in its aspirations. The title of the book speaks for itself. It is a story of humble life—a piain, unvarished narrative of the distress and struggles of the poor and lowly in their battles with life. It is essentially an American lowly in their battles with life. It is essentially an American novel, for it proves that in this country, to the possessor of talent, industry and integrity, poverty and lowly birth are no bars to

A WORD to TEACHERS about GRAMMAR.

The great demand for TOWER'S ELEMENTS OF GRAMMAR has obliged us to issue several large editions in rapid auccession, and another is now in press. It is no exageration to say that it is better adapted to the mind of the young pupil that any other Primary Grammer in use, and it is so for the reason that it recognizes the fact that the child before he enters school has begun to make a Grammar of the language for himself, and merely wants encouragement and guidance to accomplish his task. "Even the errors of children," says the author, "show how early they acquire a knowledge of its general structure." The object of this little work is to furnish the child such suldance as he requires, and to make Grammar an intellectual exercise, without oading the memory with abstract terms which it is impossible for the pupil to understand. Its definitions are clear as crystal, and the sentences which are used for illustration are perfectly simple and transparent, because they are intended for children, whose thoughts are simple and whose minds are untrained to any severe exercise of the powers of discrimination, classification or abstraction.

Although so anail, it is truly a philosophical Grammar, and it is exceedingly popular wherever it is known and used.

From A. B. Scribner, Principal of Union College, Marcelius, N. Y.:

I am so highly pleased with the advancement of the class in

TOWER'S ELEMENTS OF GRAMMAR that I can harlify find words to express my admiration of the book. It seems to me that my pupils, with only a few weeks study, are more capable of composing and analyzing sentoneps by the aid of this little book than other and older ones are by poring over the dryness and mystery of Brown's and Bullion's for three months."

To Teachers we would say, "Get the best!" Look at TOWET'S ELEMENTS OF GRAMMAR, and decide for yourself whether it wil relieve you of one of the burdens of the school-room, and assist and interest your scholars in a study which they are agt to think dry and useless.

A copy of the work will be sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of 25 cents.

A GRAMMAR OF COMPOSITION: Or, GRADUAL EXERCISES IN WRITING THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By D. B. Tower,

A. M., and Prof. B. F. Tweed.

We can now fill our orders for this extraordinary work, by MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI

WOMAN IN THE 19TH CENTURY.
Col. Fuller, of The New-York Mirror, speaks thus of this wonderful woman and of this book:
"The book is a remarkable one, and more philosophically suggestive on the Woman question than anything that has hitherto emanated from the pen of woman.
"Margaret Fuller was a decided character—a veritable entity—an apparition upon the horizon of humanity not soon to be forcetten.

orgotten.

"As a scholar, we have never known her equal among her sex; as a writer, she has few if any superiors in phineophical force and poetic suggestiveness; and as a talker, her eloquence surpassed anything we have ever heard from the lips of woman. Her finahes of eloquence had the startling spontaneity of inspiration. It seemed as if the opaque creation suddenly became transparent to her vision, and, like the rapt apoetic when caught up into the seventh beaven, ahe saw things 'not inwful for man to utter-not possible for mertals to understand."
